HISTORIAN BANCROFT.

HOW THE GREAT MAN WORKS.

His Temperate Habit of Living—An Ostracism—Intellect—His Valuable History.

Modestly nestled among the more pretentious dwellings which make the vicinity of H and Seventeenth streets, Washington, D. C., ultra fashionable is a plain two-story brick house. It has a comfortable, substantial look from the outside. Cross its threshold and you will find the very atmosphere suggest quiet and refinement. Articles of bric-a-brac and vertu scattered about in careless profusion give to the rooms a picturesque and pleasing appearance. What few paintings ornament the walls are seen every closer inspection to be veritable chef d'oeuvre. The library is one of the most complete in America. It embraces everything that could delight or impart information to the seeker after knowledge. In the midst of this library sits the proprietor, an old man, 83 years of age. His hair and beard are all very gray. He is slight in figure and a trifle under the medium in height. When he strolls through the streets, as is his wont, during the pleasant summer evenings, it is noticeable that those who dress him with the greatest deference are the more prominent in official and diplomatic circles. Among the vulgar crowd he passes almost unknown. And yet this man is one of the grandest figures in our latter-day civilization. He is Bancroft, the historian. He rises at the morning about 5 o'clock. His breakfast is as plain as an anchorite's. It includes usually a cup of chocolate, some fruit (either grapes or figs), a soft-boiled egg and a hot roll. He eats nothing more until dinner, which is always a substantial meal; that he enjoys thoroughly. He says few men can perform good brain work on a full stomach. During the morning and until luncheon is over Bancroft excludes everybody except his two secretaries. He dictates a while and then spends the remainder of the morning in reading and carefully revising the work of the previous day. From 1 o'clock until 2:30 he receives visitors. They come from all over the country, but particularly from New York and New England. Bancroft is one of the "big shots" of Washington and every one, if he be a reading man, feels it his bounden duty to pay him a call. Later in the day he goes riding. He prefers the saddle when the weather is pleasant and will sometimes travel a distance of twenty miles on horseback on these excursions. Mr. Spofford, the librarian of Congress, who is Bancroft's most intimate friend and who always rides out with him Sundays, says that on a recent occasion they rode thirty-six miles and when they returned to the city Bancroft walked with all the agility of a man scarce half his age.

"I cannot hope to live many years longer," said Bancroft to a friend recently, "but I am anxious before passing away to finish the work I am at present engaged in. I can accomplish it in eight years more. I am never sick and enjoy the best of health. Horace Binney, of Philadelphia, lived to the age of 95, and Titian was 99 when he left the stage of action. Am I too sanguine in thinking that I shall at least be permitted to live until 90?"

There was a wistful look in his grave face which showed his deep anxiety to live, not for the sake of existence merely, but that he might instruct and benefit mankind.

The work to which Bancroft referred was a rest of the history of the United States. The original history appeared in ten volumes, supplemented by two others called the "History of the Formation of the Constitution." This latter work has received the very highest encomiums from men of letters in the old world and the new. Its close would indicate that the author had the design of carrying the narrative still further. But he will not. He says his remaining years will be devoted solely to the compilation or recast of his work of letters in the old world and the new. Speaking of this Mr. Spofford, who is largely in his confidence, says: "The reader will find the pages of these volumes filled with matter no less interesting and important than the preceding. He will meet with the same brilliant and daring style; the same picturesque sketches of character and incident; the same acute reasoning and compass of erudition. These are the sentiments of a devoted friend, but they spring from a judgment ripe in bookish lore."

Don't be mean.

The "Hawkeye's" Fanny Man gives sound advice to the boys.

Burlington Hawkeye.

Don't be mean, my boy; don't do mean things and say mean things. Cultivate a feeling of kindness, a spirit of charity broad and pure for men and things. Believe the best of everybody, have faith in humanity, and as you think better yourself, so will you think better of others. Measure a man's character by the esteem in which he holds other men. When I hear other men repeatedly declaring that all other men are knaves, I want a strong indorsement on that man's paper before I lend him money. When a man assures me that all the temperance men in his town take their drinks on the sly, I wouldn't leave that man and my private demijohn—if I had one—together in a room five minutes. When a man tells me that he doesn't know one preacher who isn't a hypocrite, I have all the evidence I want that that man is a liar. Nine times in ten, and frequently oftener, you will find that men endeavor to disguise all other men with their own weakness, failings and vices. So do you, my boy, think well and charitably of people, for the world is full of good people.

And if you are mean, you cannot conceal it. People will know it. Our unfortunate, human fondness for gossip always puts us in possession of all the worse qualities of each other. Don't you and your intimate friends, my boy, discuss the weak and evil points in your neighbors' character? Of course you do; and when you are the absent one, be assured, Telemachus, that your friends are in like manner discussing you. Indeed they are. They know all about you, and that which you would have least known they know the best.

And at that rate, my son, you know it, and that is enough. Sometimes I wonder what a mean man thinks about when he goes to bed. When he turns out the light and lies down. When the darkness closes in about him, and he is alone, and compelled to be honest with himself. And not a bright thought, not a generous impulse, not a manly act, not a word of blessing, not a graceful look, comes to bless him again. Not a penny dropped into the outstretched palm of poverty, not the balm of loving word dropped into an aching heart; no sunbeam of encouragement cast upon a struggling life; the strong right hand of fellowship reached out to help some fallen man to his feet—when none of these things come to him as the "God bless you" of the departed day, how he must roll away from himself and sleep on the other side of the bed.

When the only victory he can think of is same mean victory, in which he has wronged a neighbor. No wonder he always sneers when he tries to smile. How pure and fair and good all the rest of the world must look to him, and how cheerless and dusty and dreary must his own path appear. Why, even one lone, isolated act of meanness is enough to scatter cracker crumbs in the bed of the average, ordinary man, and what must be the feelings of a man whose whole life is given up to mean acts? When there is so much suffering and heartache and misery in the world, anyhow, why should you add one bound of wickedness or address to the general burden. Don't be mean, my boy; be better; injure a thousand times rather than commit it once.

A Picky Woman's Success.

I knew well Mr. Leslie, who died so suddenly two years ago. He was not only an artist of rare skill and power, but he was a business man of tremendous energy. I suppose it is known that his name was not originally Frank Leslie at all, but Henry Carter. He was an English boy, and when his mother sent him into the land of dry goods "of London, England," he studied and practiced art on the sly, made pictures for the illustrated paper under the nom de crayon of "Frank Leslie," and finally bolted and came to New York to pursue his chosen calling. Finding that the name of his adopted name had preceded him, he adhered to it, and when it became obvious that nobody knew Henry Carter, he applied to the Legislature and had his name changed to Frank Leslie. While in the enjoyment of splendid health, he was laid on his New York day, 1880, that he had but ten more days to live. He made his will, giving, if I remember correctly, all his property to his wife, and enjoining on her to go to the office, sit in my place and do my work.

"You seem to have justified Mr. Leslie's confidence in your ability was said to his wife."

"The business certainly never was as successful as now," she said quietly; "but perhaps it is somewhat to be attributed to the prosperity times."

Her face glowed with satisfaction as she spoke. "You have not had an easy time," I said.

"Not very; I had eight law suits the first year and won them all. Mr. Leslie's friends tried to break the will. It would have been a shame if they had succeeded, for Mr. Leslie had disinherited them for their misconduct, and positively refused to see them during the last year of his life, and it was only to gratify me he consented to let one of them come to his death bed with protestations of penitence. Then the creditors tried to get the whole property and drive me out. I refused to do so. They said they would give me $20,000 and send me to Europe. I was absolutely without money, suffering from the very necessities of life. But I said: 'No, I am Frank Leslie's widow, and will carry out Frank Leslie's instructions to the letter whatever happens.' Under the compromise with the creditors it was necessary that I should immediately pay $20,000 for a residence. I had no money, but I knew nobody of whom I could borrow it. In the midst of my perplexities, a lad in the office, without my knowledge, called on Mrs. Theo. K. Smith, of Brooklyn, and laid the case before her. She was a wealthy and kind-hearted lady—a total stranger to me—and the result was that she gave me, without security, her check for $50,000. You may imagine how surprised and grateful I was to come into possession of the property through such means. This was in May of last year. I agreed to repay the first instalment of $5,000 on November 1, but the summer was a prosperous one, and last October I repaid the entire sum of $50,000 and interest before the first instalment was due. I was free from debt and rejoiced in it as like being snatched from shipwreck."

"Is the name being pirated any more?" I inquired.

"No; that has been finally settled; and to clinch it I have had my name changed to Frank Leslie by law. So my name is no longer Marian, Fanny or Miriam Leslie or even Mrs. Frank Leslie, but just Frank exactly like my husband's, and identical with the trade mark."

As the doctor turned sadly away from the patient whom he found using Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, he said: "It beats me every time."

"Troubles often come from whence we least expect them. Yet we may often prevent or counteract them by prompt and intelligent action. Thousands of persons are constantly troubled with a combination of diseases. Disordered kidneys and constipated bowels are the tormentors of many. I think that Kidney-Wort acts on these organs at the same time, causing them to throw off the poisons that have clogged them, and so relieving the whole system."

"The Diamond Dyes for family use have no equals. All popular colors easily dyed, fast and beautiful. 10 cents a package."

The Rev. Geo. H. Traver, of Sourdon, Ind., says: "Both myself and wife were cured by Sullivan's Consumption Cure. For sale by H. B. Cochran, druggist, 137 and 139 North Queen street."

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer.

It is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water, and, as its name indicates, it restores the hair to its natural color. It will immediately free the head from all dandruff, restore gray hair to its natural color and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner effect the health, which Sulphur, Sugar of Lead and Nitrate of Silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. SMITH, HILL & CO., Wholesale Agents, Philadelphia, and C. N. CRITCHELTON, New York. Jan11-1v82

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS.

STRENGTH

to vigorously push a business, strength to study a profession, strength to regulate a household, strength to do a day's labor without physical pain. All this represents what is wanted, in the often heard expression, "Oh! I wish I had the strength!" If you are broken down, have not energy, or feel as if life was hardly worth living, you can be relieved and restored to robust health and strength by taking Brown's Iron Bitters, which is a true tonic—a medicine universally recommended for all wasting diseases.

501 N. Fremont St., Baltimore.

During the war I was injured in the stomach by a piece of a shell, and have suffered from it ever since. About four years ago it brought on paralysis, which kept me in bed six months and the best doctors in the city said I could not live. I suffered fearfully from indigestion, and for over two years could not eat solid food and for a large portion of the time was unable to retain even liquid nourishment. I tried Brown's Iron Bitters and now after taking two bottles I am able to get up and go around and am rapidly improving.

G. DWELZ.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is a complete and sure remedy for Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Malaria, Weakness and all diseases requiring a true, reliable, non-alcoholic tonic. It enriches the blood, gives new life to the muscles and tone to the nerves.
